Pats do it again, win 6th Super Bowl title

Brady, Belichick and company kept their dynasty rolling in a low-scoring affair against the Rams.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

They say you can't teach an old dog new tricks. Good thing all the New England Patriots know how to do is win.

Even if it was in one of the ugliest Super Bowls ever.

For the third time in five years and the sixth time since 2002, the dynastic and veteran New England Patriots, led by Bill Belichick, are NFL champions, defeating the up-and-coming Los Angeles Rams 13-3 in Super Bowl LIII on Sunday night at Mercedes-Benz Stadium in Atlanta.

Running back Sony Michel provided the lone touchdown of the game with just seven minutes left in the fourth quarter as the Patriots defense put on one of the more dominating performances in the game's history, holding the NFL's No. 2 offense to just 260 total yards.

Jared Goff was held to just a 50 percent completion rate with just 229 yards through the air. He was the only real threat to stop as Los Angeles inexplicably kept Todd Gurley on the bench for large portions of the night.

Quarterback Tom Brady continued to cement his status as the greatest quarterback of all time, winning his sixth Super Bowl title in his ninth appearance in the big game. Only the Pittsburgh Steelers franchise has as many Super Bowl rings as Brady now.

While he didn't have the offense necessarily clicking on all cylinders, completing 21-of-35 passes for 265 yards and no touchdowns, his No. 1 target in Julian Edelman took home Super Bowl MVP honors after posting 10 receptions for 141 yards.

It was a less than auspicious start for both sides, whose high-powered offenses were expected to start rolling immediately. The game was scoreless through the first quarter, which featured a Brady interception on his first pass of the game, the Patriots burning through two timeouts in the first quarter, and a Stephen Gostkowski missed field goal.

The Rams were just broken as they accrued just 32 yards and a first down in their first three possessions.

A scoreless first quarter is commonplace when the Patriots are involved in a Super Bowl, though. Out of the now nine scoreless opening quarters in Super Bowl history, the Patriots have been featured in five of them. They had won the previous four.

Gostkowski finally provided a breakthrough with a 42-yard field goal inside five minutes of the second quarter. It proved to be the only scoring of the half as the Rams were held to just 57 total yards in the opening 30 minutes while giving star running back Todd Gurley just three carries.

The 3-0 scoreline was the second-lowest halftime mark in the game's history behind Super Bowl IX, which was 2-0 between the Pittsburgh Steelers and Minnesota Vikings.

The stout defensive play continued well into the second half as neither Brady nor Goff could find any sort of way to the end zone. While the Patriots would sputter near midfield, the Rams were simply overmatched by New England's defensive schemes, punting on all of their first eight possessions.

Midway through the third quarter, Edelman was outgaining the entire Rams offense 128-82.

The Rams found their breakthrough with 2:11 left in the third, their ninth possession of the game, thanks to a Greg Zuerlein 53-yard field goal that capped off a 10-play, 42-yard drive.

With the score at 3-3 heading into the final 15 minutes, it was the lowest combined score after three quarters in Super Bowl history.

With seven minutes in the game, a touchdown finally came when Michel provided the game-winning touchdown, punching home a two-yard rush. The Georgia product became just the second rookie in the last 30 years to record a rushing touchdown in a Super Bowl, which provided some life to the defensive stalemate.

The Patriots iced the game on the Rams' ensuing possession, one of their most promising of the game, when Stephon Gilmore picked Goff off on the New England four-yard line with 4:27 to go.

A strong ground game of Michel and Rex Burkhead proceeded to help get the Patriots up two possessions in the final minute. A Gostkowski 41-yard field goal with 1:12 left put New England up by two possessions.

Sure, it wasn't pretty. In fact, it might have been one of the worst Super Bowls ever played. But that won't bother Bostonians in the slightest, as they'll celebrate another title in Beantown this week.

Warren apologizes to Cherokee Nation for DNA test

The Mass. senator "reaffirmed she is not a Cherokee Nation citizen."

Democratic presidential contender Elizabeth Warren has apologized to the Cherokee Nation for taking a DNA test in a widely criticized effort to prove her claims to Native American ancestry, the tribe said on Friday.

The Massachusetts senator called Bill John Baker, the principal chief of the Cherokee Nation, on Thursday to apologize for taking the DNA test last year, said Julie Hubbard, a Cherokee Nation spokeswoman.

"It was a brief and private conversation but I understand that she did apologize for causing confusion on tribal sovereignty and tribal citizenship and the harm that has resulted," Hubbard said in a statement.

The chief and other tribal leaders appreciate that Warren "reaffirmed she is not a Cherokee Nation citizen — or a citizen of any tribal nation," Hubbard said.

A Warren spokeswoman did not respond to a request for comment.

Warren angered tribal leaders and some of her fellow Democrats when she decided to take the test to put to rest criticism from Republicans of her ancestry claims.

The most notable critic has been Republican President Donald Trump, who frequently belittles Warren by calling her "Pocahontas."

The results found Warren had at least one Native American ancestor many generations ago. But Native American leaders criticized Warren for using a DNA test to lay claim to even a vague connection to a tribal nation, saying culture and sovereignty were just as important as blood and the tests did not confer the rights of tribal citizenship.

Sen. Elizabeth Warren. GETTY IMAGES

Democrats feared Warren was playing into the hands of Trump and other Republicans by engaging them on the issue.

At a campaign stop in Sioux City, Iowa, last month, Warren told a voter who expressed concern about the decision that, given the political attacks, she had decided "to put it all out there."

"I am not a person of color. I am not a citizen of a tribe. Tribal citizenship is very different from ancestry. Tribes, and only tribes, determine tribal citizenship, and I respect that difference," Warren said. REUTERS

Warm start to February's first week, then cold temps return

The Bay State is set to experience a relative heat wave following last week's brief-but-brutal brush with the dreaded polar vortex.

The National Weather Service predicts a cold start to a sunny Monday, but then temperatures are expected to jump up to as high as 54 degrees.

Monday evening will see a low of 38 degrees with slight chance of rain around 3 a.m.

Tuesday is expected to be a far cry from the frigid polar vortex of just a few short days ago, with temperatures reaching a high near 60 degrees.

The rest of the week will cool down, with temperatures returning to the low 40s and mid-30s. While these temperatures aren't expected to break any records, they are unseasonably pleasant nonetheless.

Forecasters predict a sunny day with a high near 40 degrees on Wednesday, with more seasonable cold and cloudy weather rolling in for the remainder of the week, starting with a 50 percent chance of a rain/sleet mix in the evening hours.

GETTY IMAGES

There is a chance of lingering rain showers possible throughout Thursday and Friday, with temperatures dipping into the mid-30s on Thursday night. Friday is expected to see a high of 45 degrees before clearing up in the evening.

For the weekend, however, a cold front is expected to head our way, with temperatures expected to drop to about 25 degrees. Northern Central Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire are advised to expect icy conditions.

NWS Boston tweeted: "After another very cold day, temps moderate to seasonable levels this weekend with dry weather continuing. Highs should reach well above normal early next week before colder weather returns by Wednesday. Next real chance for precipitation will be late next week."

Weather.gov warned that "there is the potential for a period of icing in the form of freezing rain and sleet, mainly across interior southern New England sometime Wednesday night into Friday. This may eventually require the need for winter weather headlines, but a lot of uncertainty remains."

Bryce Dallas Howard helps Hasty Pudding welcome first co-ed cast

"It's about time."

MATT JUUL
matthew.juul@metro.us

Bryce Dallas Howard helped Harvard's Hasty Pudding kick off a new era during the 2019 Woman of the Year ceremony last week. The actor and director was in Cambridge for a chilly parade through Harvard Square followed by a bit of roasting as she received her Pudding Pot at Farkas Hall. Howard also got the chance to witness a big moment for Hasty Pudding thanks to the theatrical group's production of "France France Revolution," which featured the first co-ed cast in the company's history.

"It's about time," Howard told Metro during a press conference. "I'm really, really grateful to be here in general, and especially this year. It's a huge honor."

Hasty Pudding endured a bit of controversy at last year's festivities over its long-standing all-male tradition. After some students called for Mila Kunis to boycott the 2018 Woman of the Year ceremony, Hasty Pudding announced it would end the policy and allow women to join the cast. Howard told reporters that she was happy to be part of the "first year of the new Hasty Pudding."

The "Jurassic World" star and daughter of director Ron Howard is a noted advocate for equality in the entertainment industry and recently announced her support for the 4 Percent Challenge, which calls on studios and filmmakers to give more opportunities to female directors. A study by the USC Annenberg School of Communication and Journalism found that women directors worked on only 4 percent of the last decade's thousand highest-grossing films.

"The statistics are just absolutely abysmal and embarrassing," Howard said. "I absolutely jumped on that."

Howard said she hopes to work with more female directors and collaborators in the future, including Boston native and "SMILF" creator Frankie Shaw. "I think Frankie Shaw is remarkable."

Free things to do this month

Have some free February fun. GETTY IMAGE

Stop hibernating and have some fun with festivals, workouts and dancing!

MOIRA CALLAHAN
letters@metro.us

It's a tough time of the year. We're only a few weeks into winter, and there's been days in the single digits. It's not even the temperature, it's the windchill that freezes you down to your soul. Thankfully, we live in a big city with plenty of fun, fresh and free things to do this February besides hibernating! Here is our guide to the best free things to do in Boston this month.

MIT swing dance lessons

Did you guys see "The Great Gatsby" and find yourselves a little jealous? Well, now you can enjoy a little bit of the '20s lifestyle with MIT's swing dance lessons. Learn how to jitterbug, jive and boogie-woogie every Wednesday. All dance lessons are free. There's even a dance afterward from 9-11 p.m. so you can show off your new moves.

Every Wednesday, 7:30-9 p.m., Walker Memorial, 142 Memorial Dr., Cambridge, mit.edu/swing

ICA Free Thursday Nights

Life hack: You don't have to pay to enjoy art at the ICA ever again, as long as you go on Thursday nights. This month, you get four chances. As a bonus, until Feb. 21 the ICA is hosting the "William Forsythe: Choreographic Objects" exhibit.

This art installation is the "first comprehensive American exhibition of performative objects, video installations and interactive sculptures of choreographer William Forsythe." But don't trust us, go check it out this Thursday for free.

Every Thursday, 5-9 p.m., Institute of Contemporary Art, 25 Harbor Shore Dr., icaboston.org

Frost Fit Workouts on the Esplanade

We can get a little lazy in the winter. Hey, when it's single digits outside, no one is hankering to get outside and run a few miles. But the Frost Fit Winter Series is coming to the Esplanade every Saturday this February. With some encouragement and proper clothes, Frost Fit Workouts are a great way to start the year with healthy habits. Anyone who attends these workouts will receive a Frost Fit series headband, bagels, coffee and hot chocolate.

Every Saturday, 10-11 a.m., Hatch Memorial Shell, 47 David G. Mugar Way, esplanade.org

Chinese New Year parade

Chinese New Year is an important holiday to all who celebrate it. The Spring Festival includes delicious foods, decorations and dance performances. Come to Chinatown this year to celebrate the Year of the Pig that will feature cultural art demonstrations, book readings, and crafting.

Feb. 17, 10 a.m.-4 p.m., Phillips Square, 1 Harrison Ave., ccbaboston.org

'Velvet Buzzsaw' wants you to rethink what makes art successful

Writer and director Dan Gilroy talks us through it.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

Rene Russo and Jake Gyllenhaal star in "Velvet Buzzsaw." CLAUDETTE BARIUS/NETFLIX

"Velvet Buzzsaw" isn't a horror film.

Sure, it has the gore, set pieces and frights that define the genre, but its writer and director Dan Gilroy insists it is really a "satirical thriller" that is set in an museum, a place that he has always found enticing.

"I was in a contemporary museum one night near closing with all this freaky weird art and I just thought this would be a cool place to write a thriller," Gilroy tells Metro. "Then it clicked."

Gilroy insists that his main duty with "Velvet Buzzsaw," which revolves around the paintings of a recently deceased unknown artist haunting and murdering the higher-ups in the art world, was to make it entertaining.

But he also admits that there's plenty of subtext bubbling underneath the film, especially when it comes to the battle of art and commerce, as he is a strong advocate that art is more than a commodity and that artists invest their soul in their work.

"The quality of the work isn't judged by the number of views or amount paid or clicks. Success doesn't diminish your work but it doesn't define it. I wish any artist all the commercial success in the world. But this over-commoditization of art, this idea of buying art as an investment, locking it all away so no one can see it just to increase value, the idea of looking at something and saying, 'Oh this made $80 million, this must be important.' I hope people get away from that concept."

"I understand artists want their art to be shown. They want it to be big. But any artists out there struggling, never lose sight of you and what you learned from it and never lose sight that even if only a small amount of people see it, it is still highly relevant. Beauty is its own reason for being, and it's something to be quantified."

Gilroy saw "Velvet Buzzsaw" as the perfect opportunity to marry these ideas together. But he was just as intent on making sure that the film was laced with a humor and satirical edge that kept it from being dry.

"People overlook humor in the form of satire or camp. I thought it would be interesting to mix satire with thriller."

There was one more major film that Gilroy used as a constant reference point in these pursuits.

"'American Psycho.' It's so beautiful what's done in that film. It's a mixed genre film and you're laughing, you're scared, you're thinking. I thought, 'Wow. This is really the benchmark that I want to try to hit here.' That's a polarizing film and that's fine. But the people who love that film, love that film and I do love that film."

Gilroy also had the talents of Jake Gyllenhaal, who he previously collaborated with on "Nightcrawler," to elevate and aid him. But what is it that Gilroy finds so exciting about working with the Academy Award nominated actor?

"Jake is fearless and wants things to challenge him. By the time I started creating the character I knew he would be challenging. That was organic to this story. Hopefully Jake has a new take on something you haven't seen before. I knew that Jake was going to dig his teeth into it, because Jake wants to try everything, to see where it goes, and so that's really a defining quality to our relationship."

"Velvet Buzzsaw" is now on Netflix.

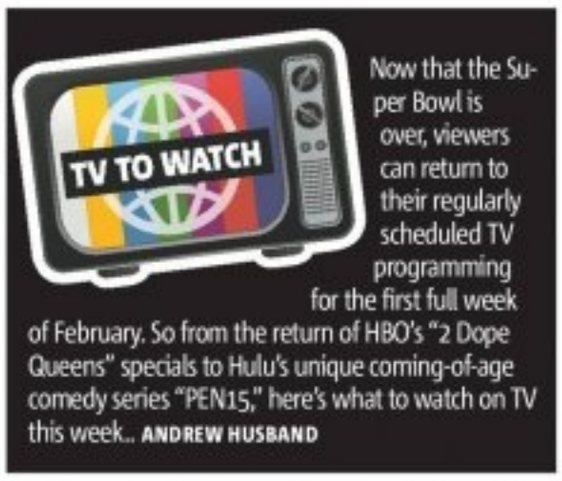
WEDNESDAY | FEBRUARY 6th
7:30PM



Now that the Super Bowl is over, viewers can return to their regularly scheduled TV programming for the first full week of February. So from the return of HBO's "2 Dope Queens" specials to Hulu's unique coming-of-age comedy series "PEN15," here's what to watch on TV this week... ANDREW HUSBAND

"MAN WITH A PLAN"

Feb. 4 at 8:30 p.m. on CBS

"Friends" alum Matt LeBlanc's CBS comedy "Man With a Plan" returns for a third season with the premiere episode "Wife-Proof." Now that his wife and business partner, Andi (Liza Snyder), is going to be spending more time in the offices of their construction company, Adam (LeBlanc) realizes that he needs to turn the male-dominated den into a more female-friendly environment. Kevin Nealon, Kali Rocha, Stacey Keach and other regulars are also returning.

"AMERICAN HOUSEWIFE"

Feb. 5 at 8 p.m. on ABC

The ABC family comedy series returns from a short break for its midseason premiere Tuesday. It couldn't have come at a better time, what with the recent government shutdown and reports of delays at the IRS, for "The Things You Do" finds husband Greg (Diedrich Bader) insisting on doing the family's taxes. Wife Katie (Katy Mixon), meanwhile, quickly realizes that she must take matters into her own hands in order to avoid catastrophe.

"2 DOPE QUEENS"

Feb. 8 at 11 p.m. on HBO

Following the official end of the podcast and the first run of HBO specials in 2018, Jessica Williams and Phoebe Robinson's comedy variety series is back for another four episodes. This time around, they will focus on "Fashion," "Nostalgia," "Music" and "Regal AF." Celebrity guests include Lupita Nyong'o, Daniel Radcliffe, Janet Mock, Lizzo and Keegan-Michael Key. Each entry will also feature a slew of up-and-coming standup comedians.

"PEN15"

Feb. 8 on Hulu

Imagine a mashup of Bo Burnham's celebrated film "Eighth Grade" and the classic camp comedy "Wet Hot American Summer." Chances are what you imagined will be pretty close to Maya Erskine and Anna Konkle's quirky coming-of-age comedy series "PEN15," which debuts Friday on Hulu. Executive produced by Andy Samberg, Akiva Schaffer and Jorma Taccone of The Lonely Island fame, "PEN15" sees Erskine and Konkle playing 13-year-old versions of themselves during the year 2000.

EDUCATION

3 Colleges that help you handle student debt

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

With collective U.S. student loan debt nearing $1.5 trillion, some colleges are testing innovative solutions to help reduce student borrowing. Using no-strings-attached student loan payoff-assistance programs, college loan alternatives and annual student debt letters, these three universities are doing their part to curb college debt.

1. University of Pittsburgh

The University of Pittsburgh is offering graduating seniors up to $5,000 in federal student loan relief with one request: They pay it forward.

The school's new program, Panthers Forward, will help recent graduates chip away at student debt and introduce them to alumni mentors to encourage professional development. Students have no obligation to repay the gift, but the university is encouraging recipients to make financial contributions to sustain the program.

2. Purdue University

Purdue University's Back a Boiler income-share agreement program is an alternative to private student loans and parent PLUS loans. In an income-share agreement, or ISA, students get tuition funding in exchange for a fixed percentage of their future income for a set period of time. There's a cap on the total amount they can pay back.

2017 Purdue graduate Andrew Hoyler received $16,000 through an ISA in his second year of school. Now, 5.89% of the monthly income he earns as a regional pilot goes toward repayment. Hoyler will make payments for 104 total months — about eight and a half years — or until he has paid back 2.5 times the initial amount, or $40,000. Hoyler, says the ISA has been "more streamlined and easy to understand."

3. Indiana University

Student loan borrowing at Indiana University has dropped 19% across all IU campuses from the 2011-12 school year to 2017-18, according to the university. During that period, the administration has implemented a suite of resources and programs to reduce borrowing.

Most prominently, the university begin sending annual letters informing students of the amount they've borrowed and their estimated future monthly loan payments. Since then, states including Indiana, Nebraska and Florida have passed laws requiring colleges and universities to disclose similar information to federal student loan borrowers annually.

Tenure-Track Faculty Position in the Department of Biochemistry and Cell Biology and the Norris Cotton Cancer Center at the Geisel School of Medicine at Dartmouth

The Department of Biochemistry and Cell Biology (BCB) and the Norris Cotton Cancer Center (NCCC) at the Geisel School of Medicine at Dartmouth invite applications for a tenure-track appointment at the rank of Assistant Professor to join our Cancer Biology and Therapeutics (CBT) Research Program. Exceptional candidates at senior ranks may also be considered.

We seek an outstanding and highly collaborative individual to develop an innovative research program in translational cancer research, including but not limited to the study of vertebrate models of cancer, development of novel therapeutic strategies for cancer, and structural biology of cancer drug targets. NCCC, one of 47 NCI-designated Comprehensive Cancer Centers, offers a dynamic and interactive environment, with a commitment to research excellence commensurate with Dartmouth's status as an R1: Doctoral University – Highest Research Activity in the Carnegie Classification. The successful candidate will have access to thriving multidisciplinary graduate programs through the Guarini School of Graduate and Advances Studies (e.g., Program in Molecular and Cellular Biology, Program in Quantitative Biomedical Sciences, and the Program in Experimental & Molecular Medicine). In addition to NCCC, faculty members in the BCB Department benefit from highly collaborative and collegial interactions across Dartmouth, inclusive of other departments at Geisel, the School of Arts & Sciences, and the Thayer School of Engineering. In addition, candidates may benefit from interactions with three current NIH Centers of Biomedical Research Excellence (COBREs), Dartmouth's supercomputing networks (e.g., Discovery); and Dartmouth's Clinical and Translational Science Institute (SYNERGY). A generous start-up package as well as access to state-of-the-art research facilities will be provided. Successful candidates are expected to develop a robust research program and excel in graduate student teaching. Applicants should have a PhD, MD, or equivalent degree with relevant post-doctoral training and a track record of research productivity.

Application materials should include a cover letter, curriculum vitae, a statement of research accomplishments and goals that emphasizes the clinical cancer relevance of their research (up to 3 pages), and three letters of recommendation. Application materials should be uploaded electronically to: https://apply.interfolio.com/59787. Review of applications will begin February 15th and continue until it is filled.

The Geisel School of Medicine at Dartmouth is located in the picturesque Upper Connecticut River Valley on the New Hampshire/Vermont border, and is surrounded by a vibrant academic and professional community offering excellent schools, lively arts, and an unmatched quality of life in a beautiful, small town setting. We are also only a few hours away from Boston MA, Burlington VT, and Montreal, QC.

Dartmouth is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer with a strong commitment to diversity and inclusion. We prohibit discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, disability, veteran status, marital status, or any other legally protected status. Application by members of any under-represented group is encouraged.

Patriots aren't quite done dominating yet

While the NFL world roots for the Patriots to fall, New England keeps winning.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

There's going to come a day when the New England Patriots competing in a Super Bowl is not commonplace.

There will be a time when children born in 2000 will have to face the harsh reality of seeing Boston's NFL franchise playing for an NFL championship once in a blue moon rather than every other year — or four times in five years.

That time is not now, though. Nor will it be for at least another few years.

Once again, the Pats are world champions, the sixth time in 18 years they've gotten their hands on the Lombardi Trophy.

There won't be much time to reflect on Super Sunday before the seemingly annual question that makes Patriots fans roll their eyes comes creeping in:

Is this the end of the Patriots?

Probably not.

The legend that is Brady has already gone on record saying there is no chance that he retires this offseason. Even at 41, he's still one of the top quarterbacks in the league who, obviously, is capable of carrying his team to the highest of peaks in the game.

After all, the man wants to play until he's 45... at least.

While there were some indications that he might be slowing down during the regular season, the brilliance of Belichick will continue to preserve the ageless Brady and the Patriots' status as one of the best teams in the NFL.

New England's playcalling, as evident during their postseason run, ensures that Brady will get the ball out of his hands quickly and avoid contact on a majority of his dropbacks.

It's a defense's equivalent of death by 1,000 paper cuts as the Patriots' series of screens and slants is practically uncoverable and unstoppable.

If it keeps working, Brady could play until he's 50.

That's bad news for the rest of the NFL because it's the general consensus that once Brady goes, so will Belichick. Then, and only maybe then, will the Patriots experience a few lean seasons.

With the dynamic duo still intact, the Patriots will continuously be the favorites to at least win the AFC East. Things might be looking up for the New York Jets, but their rebuilding process is still a couple years away from making them legitimate contenders.

As for the rest of the division, the Miami Dolphins and Buffalo Bills don't necessarily provide much of a threat. And regardless of who the Patriots cycle into their offense, Brady and Belichick will trump most of the AFC East on any given day.

Things might become a bit dicier on a grander scale, especially with the emergence of the Rams and Kansas City Chiefs. This season has only proven further that it's not wise to bet against the Patriots.

Super Bowl MVP Julian Edelman (left) and Tom Brady (right) continue to ensure that the Patriots are not going anywhere anytime soon. GETTY IMAGES

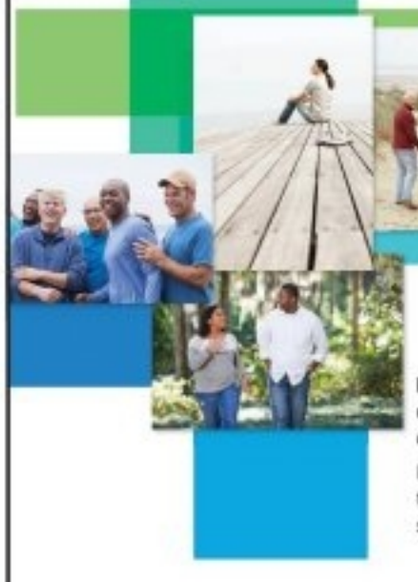
Are you living with atopic dermatitis?

If you have moderate to severe atopic dermatitis, also known as eczema, talk to your doctor about participating in a clinical research study of a potential treatment for the disease.



The purpose of this research study is to evaluate the safety and effectiveness of an investigational medication, in tablet form, or placebo for atopic dermatitis, also known as eczema.

You may qualify for participation if you:
- Are age 12 years and older and weigh at least 88 lbs (40 kg),
- Have moderate to severe atopic dermatitis and have experienced symptoms for 1 year or more,
- Have had an inadequate response to treatment with topical medication or have required systemic therapies, and
- Are willing to follow a plan of scheduled study visits, lab tests and other study procedures for the duration of the study, up to 20 weeks.

If you cannot avoid prolonged sun exposure and/or avoid the use of tanning booths or exposure to other ultraviolet light sources during the study period, you may not be eligible for this study.

For eligible study participants, all investigational medication (or placebo), study-related tests and study doctor's visits will be provided at no cost to you for the duration of the study, up to 20 weeks. Participation is voluntary and you may withdraw at any time.

Aries Take advantage of any opportunity you get to learn something new. It will make a difference when you decide to embark on a personal change. Knowledge is power.

Taurus A physical change will lift your spirits. Focus on better health, fitness and proper diet. You'll have the discipline to reach your goal. Romance will enhance your life.

Gemini Put more time and effort into your job or apply for a position that will give you greater responsibility and earning potential. Send out résumés and set up interviews.

Cancer Take it easy. Do things that will ease stress. Working on an enjoyable project will take your mind off your worries. Don't take on someone else's responsibilities.

Leo It's up to you to make changes if you don't like the way things are going. Use your intelligence and connections to take advantage of opportunities and new beginnings.

Virgo If you participate in something unusual, you'll meet someone interesting. What you discover will help you redefine what you want to pursue. Romance is featured.

Libra Socialize with people who have something to offer. Sharing information will help you formulate ideas, bring about change and encourage joint ventures, collaboration and interesting opportunities.

Scorpio Concentrate on self-improvement, physical health and inner growth. Don't let others deter you from doing your own thing. Avoid emotional discussions that could lead to unwanted domestic changes.

Sagittarius Look at the bright side of life. Turn any negative into a positive. Don't let change upset you. Make the most of whatever comes your way. A personal change will improve your life.

Capricorn Hard work will pay off. Putting more time and effort into improving your personal environment will also prompt you to start something new. Love and romance should be priorities.

Aquarius If you say what's on your mind, you will be able to make changes that will improve your life and important relationships. A financial gain looks promising.

Pisces Do what you can to help others, but not at the expense of going into debt or paying for someone else's mistake. Offer time, suggestions or advice, not money or prized possessions. EUGENIA LAST
